That real estate in the East End is on the boom is evidenced in the fact that Colonel David Hechinger disposed of a lot in Forest avenue, East of the Independent Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse, at a price of $15 per front foot.

PLAYGROUNDS

For the Children and a "City Beautiful"—Prizes For Prettiest Yards

At a meeting of the Civic Department of the Women's Club of Mason county held yesterday afternoon, it was decided that the club would try and obtain a playground for the children during the summer months.

It was also decided by the committee that as Maysville is so beautiful in its location and surroundings, that the civic organization stimulate in every way the making of it more beautiful. To that end hoping to stimulate the making beautiful of all home premises of whatever size and location, the committee has offered three prizes of $5 each for the three most beautiful back yards. One prize for each two words. Flower seed will be donated those persons who wish to enter the contest, which may be had by applying to the Mesas Lily and Louise Schatzmann, 311 West Second street, at any time. A back yard as small as six feet square may be made a beautiful out-of-doors sitting room by the planting of grass and simple vines such as nasturtiums, morning glories and honey suckle and a few simple flowers.

Maysville is known as the "City of Roses," and when all of the people who live in Maysville realize how beautiful a town theirs is, they will wish to carry its beauty into every part of it and in that way into the lives of its humblest inhabitants. It is hoped that all the people of Maysville will enter into this contest. This contest is open to all the citizens of Maysville.

Donations of flower seed and plants are requested by the committee.

THANKSGIVING PSALM

A Rhythmic and Grateful Chant.

A teacher in a Terre Haute public school joins in the chorus:

"Teaching is a business which requires a great deal of brain and nerve force. Unless this force is renewed as fast as expended the teacher is exhausted before the close of the year. Many resort to stimulating tonics for relief.

"For 3 years I struggled against almost complete exhaustion, getting what relief I could from doctors' tonics. Then in the spring of 1903 I had an attack of la grippe and malaria which left me too weak to continue my work. Medicine failed to give me any relief; a change of climate failed. I thought I should never be able to go back to school again.

"I ate enough food (the ordinary meals—white bread, vegetables, etc.) but was hungry after meals.

"I happened at this time to read an article giving the experience of another teacher who had been helped by Grape-Nuts food. I decided to try Grape-Nuts and cream as an experiment. It was a delightful experience, and continued so after a year and a half of constant use.

"First, I noticed that I was not hungry after meals.

"In a few days that tired feeling left me, and I felt fresh and right, instead of dull and sleepy.

"In three months, more than my usual strength returned, and I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"I finished the year's work without any kind of tonics—was not absent from duty even half a day.

"Am still in the best of health, with all who know me wondering at the improvement.

"I tell them all, 'Try Grape-Nuts.' Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

The Editor of the Courier-Journal presents his compliments to the Hon. Percy Haley, the Hon. J. C. W. Beckham and the Hon. J. B. McCreary and wishes politely to inform them that he is not Trickster Haley, et als. an aspirant for a seat from Kentucky at large, or otherwise, in the forthcoming National Democratic Convention.

In his youngster days, having a little redundant time and superfluous energy to give to pursuits outside his immediate newspaper work, he felt, mistakenly perhaps, that he might render the party and the State some service by engaging personally in the political activities about him. Setting his face resolutely against the holding of office, he did not think his disinterestedness as a journalist and his usefulness as a citizen would be impaired, or put to question, if he accepted on occasion such posts of empty honor as unsolicited sometimes came to him. Thus it happened that he sat in many State Conventions and in six National Conventions, presiding over one of the latter, that which nominated Tilden and Hendricks in 1876, and chosen as chairman of the Platform Committee in those of 1880 and 1888, not wholly a cipher in any, as his enemies might be willing to allow. In 1892, when, notwithstanding his expressed opposition to the nomination of Mr. Cleveland he was named by acclamation to head the delegation in the National Convention of that year, his cap of happiness, in having at least the personal good-will and approval of his fellow Democrats of Kentucky, was full to the brim. Then and there he fully resolved that never again would he cross the threshold of a political Convention.

This purpose he adhered to and maintained until an exigency appeared or seemed to appear, last August, when, obedient to a sense of duty, he took a seat in the State Convention at great inconvenience to himself, having nothing to gain except the substantiation of a sound axiomatic Democratic principle. Under the ministrations of the Hon. Percy Haley, the Hon. J. C. W. Beckham and the Hon. James B. McCreary this sound Democratic principle was voted down, and Mr. Watterson went to what he thought was undeserved defeat, not without regret that his old friend McCreary had joined hands with their erstwhile common enemy Beckham, his own quarrel with Beckham having been wholly on McCreary's account. Yet in spite of the blight they sought to put upon him, he accepted the result with philosophy, and a proper sense of self-respect, proceeding faithfully to do his party duty. There, therein and thereon he has always stood and stands to-day.

His election to the next National Democratic Convention by the Democrats of Kentucky can add not an inch to his height, breadth or thickness. He is sufficiently happy and honored to behold the great issue of Tariff reform indentified with his name come back to its rightful place as the paramount issue of the National campaign before us. He voluntarily took himself to the rear long ago and is ready—when the Master calls—to go to join the company of that noble and brilliant throng of tariff-for-revenue-men-only, with John Griffin Carlisle at their head, who have gone before him.

Messrs. Haley, Beckham and McCreary, the new triumvirate who affect to hold Kentucky Democracy in the hollow of their hands, may spare themselves the trouble of proclaiming it about the hotel-lobbies and from the house-tops that they will not permit him to be sent to the National Convention by the State Convention called for the 29th, of May. If he wished to go he would not ask leave of them. The bunch can bet their bottom dollar on that. There may be no limit set upon their machine-made power, even upon their surpassing impudence and lack of chivalry, but there is one thing they can not do and that is shut the mouth, or stay the pen, of the Editor of the Courier-Journal. He is the freest of free niggers—a Democrat unfettered and undefiled—prepared at all times to speak the truth as he conceives it, without motive of interest or fear of consequences. He is particularly ready to do so at the present moment, and with this brief notice, intended as an answer to gratuitous insolence, "let the battle go on."—Courier-Journal.

The leading article in the North American Review for April, entitled "The Unwritten Law and the Great Emergency," is by the editor, Colonel George Harvey, and presents in his brilliant, lucid style an argument against a third presidential term under any circumstances whatever. Colonel Harvey is not only one of the most forceful, logical and persuasive writers of the time, but he is a publicist of profound scholarship, an acute literary critic and a sagacious judge of men and events. His knowledge of history is comprehensive and accurate, his judgment of men based on wide acquaintance and tempered by genial kindness, is fair and upright, and he has himself been a shaper of the events of this generation.

No one could have discussed one of the vital issues of the coming campaign more cogently, or with a more complete mastery of its every bearing and aspect, and his article will stand as the final word for all time to come on the subject.

He takes up first the discussion in the convention in Philadelphia in 1787, when the constitution was made, and shows how the provision in regard to the Executive came to be what it is. Jefferson from the first objected to the re-eligibility of the President for a second term, although he thought Washington should have it, and Washington himself, although he said that he could "see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man who, on some great emergency, shall be deemed universally most capable of serving the public," showed what his belief was by steadfastly refusing a third term, and Congress, agreeing with him expressed by resolution the earnest wish that his example might be a guide to his successors. Such it became by universal acquiescence and practice, and Jefferson, in refusing a request that he should stand a third time, said that "should a President consent to be a candidate for a third election (nothing about successive) I trust he would be rejected on this demonstration of ambitious views. Andrew Jackson urged the passage of a law definitely forbidding a third election, and there was no attempt to break the rule till nearly the end of Grant's second term, and that was frustrated by nearly a unanimous vote of the House to the effect that to do so would be "frankly with peril to our free institutions."

Four years later, President Hayes' term having intervened, it was tried again, on Grant's return from abroad, it being insisted that the inhibition was only against a consecutive term. Notwithstanding a general belief that Grant was the only Republican who could be elected and the tremendous pressure brought to bear for his nomination, the convention turned him down, and it was natural to suppose that the question never would be raised again. President Roosevelt evidently thought so when he said at the end of his first term "the wise custom which limits the President to two terms (nothing about consecutive,) regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate or accept another nomination."

Space fails to follow in detail the complete demolition of the defense which Mr. Roosevelt and his supporters have made of his action. Readers who wish to enjoy a singularly luminous, complete and final exposition of one of the principal questions which are involved in the present primary elections will turn to Colonel Harvey's article.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

GIRL'S COLOR RETURNS

Was Pale and Sickly Last Spring

"Every boy is worth five dollars," is an old saying among people who think that the impurities of the blood escape when a boy breaks.

But that is a great mistake. A boy is only a sign of impure blood and has no purifying power. The only thing to do is to enrich and vivify the blood, and the best thing for this is Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil.

Other signs of bad blood are pale skin, weakness, nervousness and run-down condition of the system.

Miss Alice Jones, a bright young girl of Richmond Hill, N. Y., was pale and weak for months. She began taking Vinol and it not only made her well and strong, but also brought back her healthy color. She also says: "I like to take Vinol, as the taste is pleasant."

This is the very best time of year to put your blood in good order and build up your system, and we guarantee that Vinol will do this. If it does not, we give back your money. John C. Peacor, Druggist, Maysville, Ky.

Mrs. Lucien Smith Gives Graphic Details of the Great Titanic Disaster

Saved Only Because Husband Invoked Her Marriage Vow to "Obey"

Mrs. Lucien P. Smith of Huntington, W. Va., formerly Miss Eloise Hughes, who was saved from the Titanic only because her husband of three months invoked her marriage vow to "obey" in a last effort to induce her to enter a life craft and leave him behind, has sufficiently recovered from the shock of the experience to tell what will long be remembered as one of the most dramatic narratives of the ocean tragedy.

"I was in my stateroom when the Titanic struck the iceberg," said Mrs. Smith, "and I still wear the evening gown in which I had attended the salon concert two hours before. I thought nothing particularly of the slight shock and the grating sound until a moment later when my husband knocked at the cabin door. He entered smiling and said that there was much to be said about the ship and that I had better put on my wraps and come on deck with him to see the spectacle."

"He spoke with such admirable control that I was completely deceived, but I remember that I thought it queer he should insist upon my putting on all my heaviest clothing. Later, of course, I knew that even my husband had realized that the ship was in grave danger of sinking and that he was merely playing the part to lull me into security and at the same time hurry me to the boats."

"When he had wrapped me so warmly that I protested, he said: 'Well, sweetheart, we've only been married since February, you know,' and still laughingly, he added, 'I could not afford to have such a new wife get a cold.'"

"We went out upon the deck from our stateroom and as we went I noticed that there were many men and women rushing through the lanes of cabins, some of them partly dressed and most of them excited. Then I knew that my husband had deceived me to save me from any shock and fright."

"Lucien," I said, 'you know that the boat has struck and is sinking.'"

"O, I don't think she's sinking," he said, still striving to allay my fears, 'but it's better that you should be near the lifeboats in case anything does happen.'"

"He hurried me to the side of the first boat that was already filling and about to be lowered. He urged me to get into it and he pulled away a man who was already climbing in and held him back with one hand while he lifted me with the other over the gunwale."

"I struggled," said Mrs. Smith, "because I saw that Lucien meant to remain behind himself. I was still clinging to my husband and the officer who was helping him to separate us when the command came for the boat to go. I flung myself back upon my husband and a moment later the lifeboat was lowered."

"My husband dragged me a little way toward where the second boat was filled with women. He put both hands upon my shoulder and said: 'Sweetheart, I want you to go in the boat. I can't go with you, but you must go. There's small chance that the ship will go down anyway. I'll be safe enough, little girl, and if I find I'm not, why I'll come on one of those other life boats in plenty of time. But you've got to go for your father's sake—he'd want to know that you didn't take any risks.'"

"But still I wouldn't go," said Mrs. Smith, "and kept my arms about his neck. Then the ship listed—and there came a great elation in the deck toward starboard and toward the bow. The man who was in charge of sending off the second lifeboat ran from the side of it to where we were standing and tried to separate us."

"Some one shouted that the boat would be lowered in a minute. The seamen caught me up and my husband assisted me toward the boat. I suppose I was insane, but I still fought to stay with Lucien. Then he waved the seamen away and said to me calmly but gravely:

"Eloise, you must go in this boat. When a man married me in February you remember that you promised that you would love, honor and obey me. I never expected to have to ask you to keep that vow, but I've got to ask you now. Please let me put you in the boat."

"I struggled some more, and he asked me the second time to keep that marriage vow, and finally when the seamen were running up the second time I let my husband lead me to the lifeboat and I kissed him as he lifted me to a seat.

"The boat was lowered, and in a moment we were on the ocean, the men pulling frantically away from the ship."

"I looked back and saw that the Titanic lay like a great fallen house in the water, and I looked to the deck and saw my husband standing there against the rail, and he waved his hand and raised his cap, smiling. I waved back, but my heart was breaking and a minute after some man in the lifeboat pulled me back into my seat and held me there, for I must have tried to jump from the boat."

"For an hour we rowed away from the Titanic—and watched it settle and list most crazily as we went. I could see my husband. Sometimes he was helping to fill a lifeboat with women—sometimes he went back to the old place at the rail where he left me, and he would stand for a minute waving his hat toward me."

"We were a mile away when we saw the ship go down. I could not see my husband then, but when the great boat sank from sight I must have become frenzied, for I remember that those in the boat with me moved me to my place again. I called to the men in the boat to row back and find my husband, but they would not, though other women whose relatives had remained aboard until the last pleaded also. We told them that the lifeboat could hold many more, but the rowers kept up their way. After that I do not remember much until the Carpathia picked us up."

Mrs. Smith, as related yesterday's LEDGER, visited in Maysville with her parents, Congressmen and Mrs. Hughes of Huntington, W. Va., at the home of Dr. A. G. Browning. Mrs. Smith's cousin, Mr. Victor H. Chadwick of Huntington, was in Maysville since the accident, and said his uncle was as crazy as a cat when he heard his daughter was on the Titanic.

Ship Only 5 Miles Away From Titanic's Distress Signals

WASHINGTON, April 23.—With success only five miles away, the Titanic slid into her watery grave, carrying with her more than 1,600 of her passengers and crew, while an unidentified steamer that might have saved all, failed or refused to see the frantic signals to her for aid.

This phase of the tragic disaster was brought out today before the Senate investigating Committee when J. B. Boxhall, fourth officer of the Titanic, told of his unsuccessful attempts to attract the stranger's attention.

Bring Her With You!

Most men's stores hate to see a man bring his wife, mother or sister to help select his clothes, but this store welcomes "her." In fact, we prefer to have you bring all your lady friends with you. The store that does not like to see you accompanied by a lady is afraid of her verdict. They know that a woman can't be deceived and that she won't allow you to be talked into something you'll later regret buying. We invite you to bring "her" with you because we know she is a better judge of the materials than you. She will make you take your time and help you select the style and color most becoming to you. We are not afraid of her verdict, for we know our celebrated clothes will please her and stand every test that she can suggest. So we again repeat, bring her with you to select your new spring suit.
